Health within Northern Ireland belongs to everyone – those who use the service; those who deliver the service and those who manage the service.

The lives of countless people have been improved dramatically as a result of the dedication of the, more than, 70,000 staff who on a daily basis treat and care for the most needy and vulnerable in our society.

Northern Ireland Health Matters is designed to profile the amazing work that goes on every day.

The new online magazine is being published quarterly and disseminated to all staff via email.
