Summary of Serious Adverse Incident (SAI)

Summary of Serious Adverse Incid
A patient attended the Emergency Inpartment (ED) complaining of pira and needles at the top of their leg, with grey decoloration and toss cold to touch. The patient had a history of dac prolupus and previous acidina like symptoms. On essamination by the ED doctor, a diagrossis of adelics were made and the patient was discharged with analigenis and request for the General Practitioner (SP) to refer for neurological review.

Phose days later the patient seatherded the ED with an obvious cold white limb. They were referred suggestly to the vascular service and had surgery for clot removed, however two days later they experienced a heavy bleed and further surgery was required for above knee amputation.

The findings from the Serious Adverse Incident (SAI) review confirmed the Initial examining doctor recorded a thorough examination, however the previous history of disc prolepse influenced the differential diagnosis of referred pain and the
