The earlier we find cancer, the easier it is to treat.

So, seeing your GP is not wasting their time.

Lumps, bleeding or other unexplained changes to your body could be a sign of cancer - and the risk increases with age, especially if you're over 50. However, the good news is twice as many people now survive cancer compared with 40 years ago. So if you notice anything that worries you, your GP wants to see you.
